Welcome to the Association of Healthcare Supply and Procurement Officers (AHSPPO). Our mission is to represent the best interests of the healthcare and procurement industry while fostering a thriving community.

As a non-profit organisation, we are dedicated to advocating for our members' education and professional development. We achieve this by offering collaborative workshops, providing free online training courses, and sponsoring higher education and professional development opportunities for our members. Additionally, we strive to positively impact our industry by promoting better working and ethical practices throughout the supply chain sector.

One of our primary goals is to unite the supply chain community, facilitating discussions and the sharing of experiences. Our organisation creates numerous opportunities for networking and connection through workshops, social events, and our annual AHSPPO conference.

We are particularly excited about this year's AHSPPO conference. We have lined up some outstanding keynote speakers, including footy legend Cameron Ling and futurist Stephen Yarwood. We look forward to seeing you there. Thank you for visiting us, we hope you find the resources on this site useful.
